

Letter from the Editor

I would like to welcome everyone to the latest edition of the Journal of Theoretical and Philosophical Criminology. Our readership continues to grow as more of you have told colleagues and friends about our site, and I thank you very much for that support. JTPCRIM continues to be one of the important alternative voices in criminology, criminal justice and offender treatment, and has been able to grow its fledgling reputation. I am particularly encouraged by the regular introduction of new readers to our site that has helped to expand the overall interest of the Journal.

In upcoming editions we will be publishing a special edition on Peacemaking Criminology, which will be guest edited by Michael Braswell. Discussions continue concerning a variety of other special edition topics that hopefully will make their way to publication. We continue to be open to those interested individuals to guest edit an edition of the journal in the future.

Thanks to everyone who continues to make this project possible.

Sincerely,

David Polizzi, Editor, Journal of Theoretical & Philosophical Criminology